

Core Reinforcement Training Juvenile Correctional Officer

Core Training Reinforcement

Core Training Reinforcement (CTR) is an optional training supplement that builds on the training concepts that are covered in required core training for new corrections officers. It is designed to be delivered on the job by a supervisor, training officer, lead staff or other agency designated staff. The CTR:

- reinforces training concepts learned in core training by providing on the job opportunities for practice,
- provides agencies with a structured method to ensure new officers are aware of and understand agency specific policies and procedures related to training concepts covered in core training,
- provides an opportunity to engage supervisors in core training that their employees have received
- provides a method for agencies to assess competency development for new officers,
- and can be used in conjunction with field training and/or performance management programs.

The CTR was developed in conjunction with local correctional agency supervisors and trainers who identified critical core training concepts that could be reinforced on the job to enhance and improve learning outcomes and improved job performance. For each concept, it identifies the tasks and activities to be performed by the trainee and the responsibility of the trainer for each of those tasks and activities. Because it is optional and not required STC training, the CTR can be modified and revised as needed to meet the needs of your agency.

If you use this CTR as a standalone training, the officer can receive a max of 12 hours of STC training credit, or any fraction there of i.e., 2, 2.5, 3... hours, etc. If you choose to receive the STC training hours, a RFC will need to be submitted via the Learning Portal for the number of hours completed.

Upon completion of the CTR, the worksheets and the completion of an Annual Training Roster (if applicable) should be retained in the employee training file, as a record of training completion.
