Describe a local success story (as defined by the CCP).

In January 2011 a female offender was arrested for evading and later for failure to appear in court. At 27 she had 2 felony offenses within 3 months of one another. The offender advised she started using drugs at age 24 and her use “got out of control.” After serving a year in jail the offender was released on January 1, 2012 to serve a 3 year formal probation term. After testing positive for methamphetamine in February 2012 the offender agreed to attend a residential treatment program, however she was not ready. She failed to report to her probation officer and a warrant was issued for her arrest. The offender returned to court and was sentenced to prison for 2 years 8 months. On January 12, 2013 nearly 2 years after being released from jail the first time, the offender was released from prison to report to the Probation Department under Post-Release Community Supervision (PRCS). This time things were different; the offender was clean and committed to staying clean. She reports that she “found God in prison” and believes this happened for a reason, “I just want to help others.” She stated that this time she “...listened to suggestions” from others and “...completely removed [herself] from people, places, and things” that were drug related. The offender advised that church helped and she was “saved” in March of this year. She also indicated that she had a supportive probation officer and she “didn’t want to disappoint him... or anyone else.” The offender reported that in 2012 she started out not being honest but that changed when she was released from prison. She said, “Once you’re honest, it’s much easier to be successful.” The offender stressed that “filling up my time is key;” when she has too much idle time it becomes dangerous to her sobriety. She stated that she now puts as much effort into staying clean as she once did in getting high. The offender has 17 ½ months clean and has achieved many accomplishments since her clean date: she is a manager at her place of employment, has received 4 consecutive months of recognition from her employer, successfully completed her PRCS term and has earned back a relationship with her daughter.
